* "don't vote" indicates that either a bad candidate is running unopposed or all candidates in the race are so terrible there's no one worth voting for. I generally advocate for mitigating harm and voting for a bad Democrat when they're running against a Republican. However, since climate change is an existential threat, where an anti-environment Democrat is running against an anti-environment Republican in the state legislature, I said "don't vote." Democrats have a supermajority in the California state legislature that they do little with. The party should run pro-environment candidates in order to earn your vote. Remember: Your vote is meaningful, and there's power in withholding it.

 This seat appears twice on the ballot, for the current term that Alex Padilla was appointed to when Kamala Harris became vice president, and for the next six-year term
